Working with Other Not for Profit Organisations Policy

How we work with other not for profit organisations

CDH Australia's mission as a volunteer organisation is to provide support to families affected by CDH. We support and help fund research into the causes and better treatments of CDH, and help educate families and the community about CDH.

Given that people with CDH and their families face enormous and varied challenges and outcomes that can potentially involve a range of health complications and medical treatments as well as bereavement, CDH Australia recognises the importance of working with other not for profit organisations to build extended support networks in order to increase advocacy and awareness of available services for our families.

Other not for profit organisations include hospitals, other CDH support organisations and organisations that provide wider counselling and social services not solely aimed at CDH families.

When working with other not for profit organisations, CDH Australia will always conduct itself in a professional and ethical manner through the governance of our Board of Directors, with the values of fairness, respect, integrity and compassion in mind. CDH Australia does not align itself on a political level with any particular organisation/s and will evaluate all proposed projects and activities on individual merits.

Activities that CDH Australia will undertake when working with other not for profit organisations include:

- providing information on CDH through information booklets, hospital packs and conferences
- providing links to other organisations that elect to be included on our website; and
- joint funding, research or support projects that have been approved by our Board of Directors.

Activities that CDH Australia will not undertake when working with other not for profit organisations include:

- direct promotion of activities managed solely by other organisations;
- involvement in disputes concerning other parties; and
- participating in projects or activities that are not approved by our Board of Directors.
